

San Luis Vega, Costilla County

CCALT worked with Costilla County in the San Luis area, Colorado's oldest town which dates to the 1850's. Adjacent to the town of San Luis is the historic Vega, the only communally owned and managed agricultural land in the United States, with ownership interest passed from generation to generation of the descendants of the original pioneers. The neighboring 1,200 acres came up for sale and is now protected by the County with CCALT holding a conservation easement on the property. There are efforts underway to blend the management of this property into the communities' Vega property.
